DAVID AND ANNA MATSON.

By Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway,

Editor "New Northwest," Portland, Oregon,

WITH SEAUTIFUL ILLUSTRATIONS, AND ELEGANTLY BOUND

A new epic, from a vigorous and skillful pen, on a subject which occupies a large place in the social discussions of the day. The subject is taken from Mr. Whitteer's short nurrative of "Da vid Matson," with which the reader is probably familiar. David Matson, a Merrimae sallor was captured by the Algeriues (during one of his voyages) and sold into slavery. After many years he obtained release and was on his way to the home of his buyhood, when he fell in with his old employer, who informed him that his wife, believing him dead, had remarried, and, stanned by his teachle, he surrendered all claim as husband and father to the man who had stopped into his place, and departed. Mrs. Duniway has found a theme in this story with which har heart beats in warmest sympathy, and her lines flow on in the smooth cadence in dicative of the fullest accord. She pictures the gentle, tender, trustial Anna and the wily, coverous Pelaliah in vivid colors; and how years of poverty and longing, and the cries of the hun

Made happy through prosperity,"
While, if she persists in declining his advances, wolf-like, he threatens to abundon her to starvation and cold. And this Pointish was a "dearon,"
" In exhertations deep and load." The wanderings of David, his captivity, release, hapless interview with Pelatiah, discovery of Aum's second wifehood, and his sad going back to Algeria, are all told so pathetically that our ing thoroughly stirred. The indirections are in admirance seeping with the passages tagy are designed to portray, and a fine engraving of the author is a fitting frontispiece. The subject apprit, fire and passion of the poem should give it an extensive reading, aside from the interest which the liberary reputation of the author must awaken in it. As a specimen of book-making the volume is rectainly beautiful, and would adorn any center-table.

We know of no work so well adapted as a present. It is printed on heavy finted paper
